Overview:

DISCO DRIVE formed in Turin (Italy) back in 2002 and they have played about 300 shows since then to a growing fanbase, all over the old continent. Their sound has been described as: "The Clash queuing to get inside the Studio 54 but also Ian MacKaye unwrapping his birthday gift to find out it's a Tito Puente vinyl LP. Slave to the rhythm!". Musically they begin where all the neo- new wave bands end. They allow themselves to delve into experimentation. The percussions and drums, already present on their debut album, are now upfront more than ever and live they use two drums. Then of course they have guitar and bass, and the three of them all sing. This E. P. redefines the boundaries between noise and melody, rhythm and improvisation, pop and avant-garde. Which is also where the new material for their second full length effort is heading, which will be recorded in the autumn.

The artwork was made by top notch graphic artist and cartoonist Alessandro Baronciani. The record sounds great also because of the great mastering job made at D&M in Berlin by Frederic Schäfer. The cd version also includes the video for "All About This" (edit) directed by videomaker Nico Vascellari, also frontman of the band With Love (recently signed to GSL, label run by The Mars Volta). It has been played on heavy rotation on italian music channels where they also appeared as guests on three tv shows. Their debut has already reached its third pressing and has collected many awards including best italian debut of 2005 and they have been nominated by MTV Italy as one of the top 5 live bands of 2005.
